Higher education heads to LaPorte

By Cherry Sokoloski
North Forty News

In a continuing effort to reach out to the community, Front Range Community College has chosen LaPorte as one of its teaching sites. Beginning this fall, credit and noncredit classes will be offered at Cache La Poudre Junior High during late afternoon and evening hours.

Jim Butzek, vice president of the Larimer campus for FRCC, said the details are still being worked out, but classes will likely include math, psychology, English and computer courses.

"As a community college," he said, "our mission is to be an outreach to the community."

With the new site, he noted, residents of the north part of the county won't have to drive so far to take Front Range classes, and they may also feel more comfortable in the familiar setting of the junior high.

Butzek said the college courses will be a good fit with the After Hours classes already held at CLP Junior High.

Ginny Owen, principal at CLP Junior High, is also excited about the prospect of her school being a northern site for the community college. Besides making Front Range classes more available to people in this area, she said the site "speaks to life-long learning." While those taking college courses will benefit themselves, they will also provide good examples to her junior high students.

Owen likes having the school used by the public, because it makes people more aware of services offered by the school.

"The school is a community resource," she said, "and this makes it even more so."

Butzek, who has been at the Larimer campus for a little over one year, said one of his initial goals was to provide better outreach to the community. This semester, several Front Range classes are being held at Preston Junior High in south Fort Collins.

Butzek is soliciting input from the community on which classes will be offered in LaPorte. People may call him with their ideas at 204-8100.
